COMPLAINT

Plaintiff, Monica Prestia ("plaintiff"), by her attorneys, The Roth Law Firm, PLLC, states for her complaint against defendant as follows:

PARTIES

1. Plaintiff was an employee of defendant, Bloomberg L.P. ("Bloomberg"), serving in the position of Account Executive. She resides at 3067 Lonni Lane, Merrick, New York. Plaintiff is a married woman with one child.
2. Plaintiff took maternity leave from Bloomberg starting in September of 2005. In the 12 months prior to that, plaintiff worked at least 1,250 hours at Bloomberg.
3. Defendant, Bloomberg, is, upon information and belief, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware with its principal place of business located at 731 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York 10022. Since January 1, 2004, Bloomberg has employed at least 50 persons in Manhattan. Bloomberg is a corporate defendant as that term is used in the New York State Human Rights Law, the

New York Administrative Code, the Federal and Family Medical Leave Act, and Title VII of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended.

JURISDICTION

4. This Court has federal question and supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1367. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Title VII to redress and enjoin employment practices of Bloomberg.

VENUE

5. Venue is proper in this District under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391(b) and (c), in that a substantial part of the events giving rise to plaintiff's claims occurred in New York, and Bloomberg resides in New York. Venue is also proper under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(3) in that (i) the unlawful employment practices giving rise to plaintiff's claims were committed in New York, (ii) the employment records relevant to such practices are, on information and belief, maintained and administered in New York, and (iii) the plaintiff would have worked in New York but for the unlawful employment practices alleged.

BACKGROUND

6. Plaintiff's devotion to her career in advertising dates back to 1989. She has flourished at several high profile companies, including the New York Post and WXRK 92.3 K-Rock.

7. In December 1997, plaintiff began working as an Account Executive for Bloomberg.

8. From the outset, plaintiff performed her job in a highly competent and professional manner. She became the first employee ever to sell a Bloomberg Radio advertising package for $1 million. Less than 2 years after she started, plaintiff was promoted to become the Bloomberg Television Latin American Sales Manager, a position which required plaintiff to represent Bloomberg in Miami, Europe, and South America. In 2002, Plaintiff received the Shooting Star Award at Bloomberg's Annual Sales Awards Event. Soon after, plaintiff was offered a second promotion to Bloomberg's Wealth Manager Magazine. In 2004, plaintiff was honored, yet again, with Bloomberg's Versatility Award. Further, up until in or about August 2005, plaintiff's superiors, including, but not limited to, David Wachtel, Frank Vulpi, Bill Dimodugno, and Mariann Deluca, gave her praise, good reviews, annual raises between 5 and 10 percent of her salary, and certificates, which plaintiff understood was an additional form of compensation.

9. In or about February 2005, plaintiff, at age 38, became pregnant with her first child.

10. In or about February 2005, plaintiff's immediate supervisor, Frank Vulpi ("Vulpi") began reporting to Carole Kaschak ("Kaschak"). Upon information and belief, Kaschak is unable to become pregnant.

11. Plaintiff enjoyed a problem free pregnancy for the first 2 trimesters, and her superlative work at Bloomberg continued.

12. In or about August 2005, plaintiff began to experience health complications related to her pregnancy. Plaintiff's physician urged plaintiff to reduce her hours at work and forwarded a medical request to Bloomberg to that effect. As a result, Bloomberg's Human Resources department allowed plaintiff to change her daily schedule from 8 a.m. – 6 p.m. to 9 a.m. – 5 p.m.

PREGNANCY DISCRIMINATION

13. In or about August 2005, plaintiff's pregnancy was physically apparent. At that time, Kaschak began exhibiting extreme hostility toward plaintiff. Vulpi told plaintiff that Kaschak repeatedly ordered him to call plaintiff and question her about arriving to work at 9 a.m., even though plaintiff's revised schedule had been approved. Kaschak, herself, appeared to avoid plaintiff unless Kaschak wanted to criticize her. Whenever Kaschak approached plaintiff around that time period, Kaschak would subject plaintiff to ridicule, scorn, and anger for no apparent reason. One time, Kaschak shouted at plaintiff for being unfamiliar with a new system for documenting the particulars of sales calls, even though Kaschak knew that plaintiff had been trained with the old system, and that the new system was foreign to plaintiff. Nevertheless, Kaschak screamed at her. In contrast to Kaschak's treatment of plaintiff, Kaschak did not exhibit hostility toward similarly situated non-pregnant employees of Bloomberg. Likewise, Kaschak did not exhibit hostility toward plaintiff before her pregnancy was physically apparent.

14. Kaschak's repeated harsh treatment caused plaintiff severe stress and anxiety. Out of profound concern for the health of herself and her unborn child, plaintiff commenced her maternity leave earlier than she had planned. She began her maternity leave on or about September 1, 2005.

15. Despite the fact that she was on maternity leave, plaintiff, being a conscientious employee, worked from home, spending large quantities of time daily on the phone with clients and logging onto the Bloomberg computer network to accomplish her tasks.

HOSTILE WORK ENVIRONMENT

16. Plaintiff returned to Bloomberg on or about February 21, 2006. Immediately upon her return, Kaschak's hostility towards plaintiff escalated. Although plaintiff warmly greeted Kaschak and told her how glad she was to be back at work, Kaschak, rather awkwardly, refused to respond, look at plaintiff, or even acknowledge plaintiff's presence. Kaschak exhibited severe outward antagonism toward plaintiff. During plaintiff's first several weeks back, Kaschak, therefore, had little communication with plaintiff except Kaschak continued to ridicule plaintiff. In contrast to Kaschak's treatment of plaintiff, Kaschak did not exhibit hostility toward similarly situated employees who did not have newborn babies.

17. On or about March 13, 2006, Kaschak demanded plaintiff meet her in a conference room to discuss plaintiff's performance "right now!" Kaschak did not coordinate this meeting with Vulpi. When Kaschak met with similarly situated employees who did not have newborn babies to discuss employees' performance, Kaschak coordinated the meetings with the immediate supervisors of employees. In fact, only about one week prior to plaintiff's meeting, Kaschak met with a male employee, Orazio Siclari, to discuss performance, and Kaschak invited Vulpi, who was Mr. Siclari's immediate supervisor, to attend. Vulpi told plaintiff, however, that Kaschak specifically forbid him from attending plaintiff's meeting because Kaschak did not want Vulpi to defend plaintiff. At plaintiff's own meeting, Kaschak subjected her to an exhaustive inquisition. Going one client at a time, Kaschak scrutinized every decision plaintiff made and every action plaintiff took since returning from maternity leave. Further, Kaschak chastised plaintiff for not finishing enough work before she went on maternity leave and made her feel guilty about taking maternity leave. The meeting concluded with the understanding that plaintiff would provide additional information about several sales calls that had taken place. Plaintiff was shaking when she exited the conference room.

18. The next morning, on or about March 14, 2006, Kaschak ordered plaintiff through an instant message to meet her at the Bloomberg Human Resources department at 11 a.m. There, Kaschak and plaintiff met with Pria Varindani. At that time, Kaschak complained that plaintiff did not provide enough information about several sales calls, even though she had given the assignment to plaintiff only the previous afternoon, and plaintiff was close to completing the assignment. In response, plaintiff told Ms. Varindani details about how Kaschak had been singling her out and abusing her because of her pregnancy and newborn baby. Ms. Varindani pledged to investigate Kaschak's behavior. However, plaintiff never heard anything more about the promised investigation.

19. Thereafter, on or about March 16, 2007, plaintiff had an attorney send correspondence to Bloomberg, requesting that plaintiff no longer report to Kaschak and requesting that Kaschak receive antidiscrimination training.

RETALIATION

20. On or about March 29, 2006, plaintiff had her annual evaluation with Kaschak and Vulpi. Needless to say, it was the worst of plaintiff's career. The evaluation did not account for the portion of the year that plaintiff worked prior to taking maternity leave. At the end of the evaluation, Kaschak and Vulpi did not give plaintiff her salary and financials for the upcoming year. When an evaluation took place of similarly situated employees who did not have newborn babies, the employees were evaluated for the entire past year and received their salaries and financials for the upcoming year.

Likewise, during plaintiff's annual evaluations before she had her baby, she was evaluated for the entire past year and received her salary and financials for the upcoming year.

21. For over a month, plaintiff remained unaware of her salary and financials for the upcoming year. On or about May 2, 2006, at a meeting with Kaschak and Vulpi, plaintiff was informed that her salary would not increase in the upcoming year as it had in prior years, and that, although it was unprecedented, her certificates, which plaintiff understood was an additional form of compensation, would decrease from 15 to 10.

22. After the meeting on or about May 2, 2006, treatment of plaintiff worsened. It was customary for Kaschak to ring a bell and send a mass email around the office whenever an employee sold an advertising package. Kaschak, however, did not ring the bell or send an email when plaintiff sold an advertising package. Kaschak's inactions made plaintiff appear unproductive, while similarly situated employees without newborn babies were rewarded and appeared productive. Kaschak even ordered that plaintiff's workspace be physically moved to an area of the office that was isolated. In the new area, plaintiff faced away from the other employees, ostracizing her from her colleagues. Furthermore, Kaschak excluded plaintiff from meeting new employees and participating in office activities, while similarly situated employees who did not have newborn babies were introduced to new employees and included in office activities.

23. Upon information and belief, Kaschak spread rumors about plaintiff to another supervisor, Trevor Fellows, with whom Kaschak had a friendly relationship. As a result, on one occasion, Mr. Fellows asked plaintiff, "What is this, your third baby?"

Because of negative statements made by Kaschak, plaintiff was forced to fight the stereotyped perception that she wished to simply have her baby and be a full-time mother.

24. Because of the ongoing mistreatment that plaintiff endured at Bloomberg, plaintiff sought psychiatric help on or about May 8, 2006. Plaintiff's doctor diagnosed her with major depression. As a result of this major depression, plaintiff had to take disability leave on or about June 15, 2006.

25. Bloomberg terminated plaintiff on December 31, 2006, according to correspondence from Bloomberg's health care plan, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "A."

26. Upon information and belief, on or about the day that plaintiff was terminated, Kaschak was demoted from her position.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

27. Plaintiff filed a timely charge of discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("EEOC") and brings this action within 90 days of the receipt of a Notice of Right to Sue, issued by the EEOC on April 24, 2007, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "B."

NOTICE TO THE PERSON AGGRIEVED:

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and/or the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA): This is your Notice of Right to Sue, issued under Title VII and/or the ADA based on the above-numbered charge. It has been issued at your request. Your lawsuit under Title VII or the ADA must be filed in a federal or state court WITHIN 90 DAYS of your receipt of this notice; or your right to sue based on this charge will be lost. (The time limit for filing suit based on a state claim may be different.)

More than 180 days have passed since the filing of this charge.

Less than 180 days have passed since the filing of this charge, but I have determined that it is unlikely that the EEOC will be able to complete its administrative processing within 180 days from the filing of this charge.

The EEOC is terminating its processing of this charge.

The EEOC will continue to process this charge.

Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA): You may sue under the ADEA at any time from 60 days after the charge was filed until 90 days after you receive notice that we have completed action on the charge. In this regard, the paragraph marked below applies to your case:

The EEOC is closing your case. Therefore, your lawsuit under the ADEA must be filed in federal or state court WITHIN 90 DAYS of your receipt of this Notice. Otherwise, your right to sue based on the above-numbered charge will be lost.

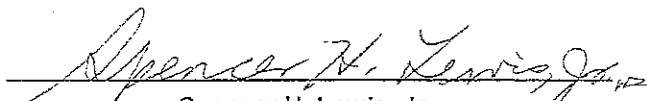

The EEOC is continuing its handling of your ADEA case. However, if 60 days have passed since the filing of the charge, you may file suit in federal or state court under the ADEA at this time.

Equal Pay Act (EPA): You already have the right to sue under the EPA (filing an EEOC charge is not required.) EPA suits must be brought in federal or state court within 2 years (3 years for willful violations) of the alleged EPA underpayment. This means that backpay due for any violations that occurred more than 2 years (3 years) before you file suit may not be collectible.

If you file suit, based on this charge, please send a copy of your court complaint to this office.
